STORY OF SEARCH FOR MISSING GIRL

Mr. Grison had gone. As we were leaving, a possible source of information, uninvestigated, we decided to find out where Mr. Grison was and see if he could help us out.

"With that purpose in view, I called upon Mr. Lloyd S. Grison, who put me in touch with the woman friend, who was in Pittsburgh, and from the aunt, I learned that Mr. Grison was in Florence, Italy. Mr. Grison's father and mother were with him in Florence at the time. The Arnold family were in the city, and the girls' disappearance, and asked them to go to Florence and talk with Mr. Grison, asking him if he could help them in any way.

The ladies were told to cable if he could help them in any way. "At this moment Mrs. Arnold is absolutely in ignorance of her daughter's whereabouts, fate or the manner of her disappearance.

"Now, I have told you all," Mr. Keith said, "and to-day we are without a theory even, and I have concealed nothing."

Mr. Arnold continues to receive letters, post cards and telegrams from all parts of the country, in which persons tell him of seeing his daughter, or if not having seen her, give him advice or make suggestions as to the best manner of going about the solution of the mystery of Miss Arnold's disappearance. Every one of these communications is investigated, no matter how far fetched it looks.

Carsville, Mich., January 29.—(By Miss Dorothy Arnold.) The Bryn Mawr student whose disappearance last December has caused a police alarm to be sent throughout this country and Europe, registered in the Moriah hotel, Carsville, last Tuesday as "Miss Jennie Williams, New York," is the belief here. The appearance of the young woman coincided in many respects with the description of Miss Arnold.

"Miss Williams" came to Carsville on the train from Detroit and remained in her room at the hotel all the afternoon. She left here on the evening train, but it could not be learned to-night for what point she purchased a ticket.

Mr. Keith then said that John W. Arnold, the elder brother of the missing girl, had made a trip to Europe, and did not tell them from New York until after he left Florence. That is the reason that we did not have any reason to believe he knew anything more about it, though the reason for the numerous friends that Miss Dorothy had, I also wish to say that a story circulated that Mr. Arnold was in the city, and that Mr. Grison's visiting his home is untrue.

Mr. Keith then told you the complete story of what may be termed the theory in this case, and the investigations which have been made have completely eliminated this theory.

DOEB'S AXE FALLS, DOZEN HEADS DROP

Collector Lists for Dismissal All Who Were Smirched in Sugar Frauds.

NO HEARING FOR THEM

Grand Jury Minutes Taken as Evidence That They Are Unfit for Service.

New York, January 29.—Nothing has so stirred up the rank and file of the local customs service as the announcement yesterday that the names of at least a dozen men had been sent to Washington with recommendation that they be dropped "for the good of the service." In some cases those in the list were accused by the self-confessed grafters in the sugar cases, and the alleged offenses were committed years ago. The charges against some of the men, if not all of them, are said to be contained in the minutes of the grand jury. They include taking money from importers for expediting the discharge of their imports. This, customs men say, had been a practice for forty years before Mr. Loeb became the collector.

According to a plan in the service, there was a conference at the customs house, at which it was decided that a criminal prosecution was impossible. The names of the men were sent forth that the accused men must either resign or be dismissed. If they did not, they would be dismissed, and so a recommendation of their dismissal has been sent to the collector.

One of the men accused is a deputy collector, with years of honorable service. He wanted a chance to prove his honesty, but this was denied. Some of the accused men have been both to Collector Loeb and to the collector in charge. They demanded a hearing. This was not granted, and now their fate rests with the collector.

The collector, however, has not yet made a decision. He is said to be in a difficult position, and is said to be in a difficult position.
